Highland Park Businesses Unite to Offer Complimentary Services on June 7th, “Cancer Survivor Beauty and Support Day”

Local Resident Turned Inspirational Idea into National Initiative

(Highland Park, IL) Cancer survivors will be marking Tuesday, June 7th on their calendars in anticipation of the 13th Annual Cancer Survivor Beauty and Support Day™ (CSBSD™). Established in 2003 by Highland Park resident Barbara Paget, it has evolved into an annual nationwide event, in all 50 states, with beauty, spa and related businesses volunteering to offer free services to cancer survivors, regardless of their type of cancer or when they were diagnosed.

“It can be a special time for survivors – including men, women and children – to meet and offer support to each other,” says Paget. “It is also a very rewarding experience for the volunteers to know they have done something special to help those in need in our community.”

To showcase this special event, First Bank of Highland Park is hosting an exhibition throughout May 2016 on their Ruth Fell Wander Community Art Wall. The community is invited to visit the exhibition which will display all the complimentary services that local businesses will be offering to cancer survivors. There will also be business cards to collect and refer to when making their free appointment.

The overwhelming response from local businesses that agreed to participate wasn’t a surprise to President/CEO of First Bank of Highland Park, Randy Green. “We are proud to be part of a community that continually shows compassion and generosity to others,” says Green. “Highland Park has always been a very caring community.”
